EUROPEAN LETTER.

The Political Status in England—English Comment on the Guiteau Trial—Sale of the Duke of Sunderland's Library.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

LONDON, Dec. [illegible]—Evidences multiply that conservatives are bent on turning the Irish troubles to party advantage. Attacks on the government are more bitter than ever. Lord Randolph Churchill's speech surpassed in violence all his previous performances. He describes the land court as a star chamber of spoliation, its members as [illegible] and proceedings as shameless plunder, and the Irish policy of the government as quackery. [illegible] says openly what an increasing number of tories say privately.

The Standard, which is often moderate and sometimes almost impartial, berates the government for indifference amid Irish disturbances, and summons Gladstone's colleagues to show some sign of independence. It complains that the country is governed by Hawarden, and asks why there are no cabinet councils and what this dictatorship of inefficiency will result in. It offers tory support to grant further powers if necessary to keep order. This disposition is seen in more than one quarter to make the most of the Irish outrages, so as to inflate English feeling. Unhappily the truth is bad enough. Outrages multiply and the work of the government does not increase proportionately. Meanwhile O'Donnell's announcement of the substantial identity of the tory and the home rule party, as regards Ireland, is neither denied nor confirmed by tories. Leading tory organs, however without giving public adhesion to the proposed bargain, have taken up the compensation for landlords by which they are practically urging on the same lines as O'Donnell, and are eagerly accepting his help. At Londonderry the election outcry against the sub-commission confiscation continues, but one decision awarding improvements to landlords is denounced as confiscation of tenants' rights. Ashley's case is a specimen of the present system of tory attacks. Ashley is apparently selected because he is a member of the government. The Standard has published a long letter alleging high rents and harsh management on his estate, but this, like many similar accounts, was based wholly upon tenants' testimony, and was refuted when the facts on the other side were published, even Irish organs admitting Mr. Ashley's explanation to be conclusive.

The farmer meeting at Aberdeen was important, being composed of delegates from forty farms residing in three counties. Resolutions avoid extreme proposals, insist on the necessity of reducing rent, and tenants' interest in land improvement and tenure, adding that the reforms should apply to existing leases.

Copious reports of Guiteau's trial continue to be telegraphed daily, and seem likely to discredit permanently American courts with the English public. The Times remarks that the trial astonishes and shocks English readers. Lawyers declare that no such spectacle of judicial incapacity has ever been seen. The constantly recurring scenes where the license allowed Guiteau, the demeanor of spectators, the applause bestowed on Scoville, and demonstrations of every kind are tolerated by the judge, and his utter inability to keep order or control of proceedings in his own court, are all unhappily regarded here as typical instead of exceptional. Lawyers moreover consider the examination of Guiteau touching his own insanity as a scandalous innovation.

The meeting called for the 10th inst. to raise a memorial to Dean Stanley will include the prince of Wales, Archbishop Canterbury, the lord chief justice and perhaps Gladstone and the duke of Westminster. It is intended to erect a monument beneath Lady Augusta Stanley's memorial window, and it is hoped also to be able to fill the chapter-house windows with stained glass. Subscriptions are invited. The deans will provide for one window and the queen gives the other.

The rule granted in the Scott-Sampson libel case is considered unlikely to disturb the verdict, the judges agreeing that it is amply supported by evidence and that damages are not excessive, but holding that an opportunity should be given to argue two technical points.

Prices obtained at the Sunderland library sale much exceeded the calculations of experts, books possessing real bibliographical value, whether early or American, fetching enormous prices. The American competing commissions carried the small volumes of tracts, printed in 16.0, to £143 and to £111. Many common books sold for a few shillings. The total of the two days' sale of 558 titles is £13,000.

The Saturday Review considers that James' "Portrait of a Lady" will maintain, but not materially increase, his reputation.

It complains that he has adopted a method by which he evades the main difficulty of the novelist's art, but the tale abounds in the quickest observation and happiest description. English critics generally appear puzzled by James' novels, constructed as they are on French, rather than on English lines. A distinguished writer pronounces them to be equal to the best modern French works.

Lowell reached Paris Monday, returning from Rome. His health is hardly restored. He was presented to-day to President Grevy by Morton, and will arrive in London Tuesday, when he resumes charge of the legation which he left with Hoppin, the secretary, two months ago. It is reported the resolve of the president to retain Lowell as minister, profoundly gratifies English and Americans alike. The French story of Morton's intention to spend the winter in Cannes on account of his wife's health, is wholly groundless. Morton remains in Paris, and has arranged a meeting of Gambetta and Lowell at lunch Monday.

ATLANTIC CABLE.

Evictions still going on.

DUBLIN, Dec. 3.—The Castletown police yesterday prevented Miss Reynolds, of the ladies' land league, from visiting tenants to be evicted. It is reported an eviction expedition will shortly be made to islands along the coast. The most important of these is in Dursey, the inhabitants of which are said to be determined to resist and possessed of dynamite.

Big Prices for Books.

The prices paid at the sale of the Duke of Marlborough's Sunderland library yesterday are considered unprecedented. A copy of "Odes of Anacreon" realized £22; another valuable work, printed in 1494, put up at £9, realized in consequence of sharp competition £51. Works by "Apolonius Rhodius," put up at £1, brought £16. A work by Thomas Aquinas realized £181. A copy of "Orlando Furioso," with autograph of William Cecil, Queen Elizabeth's secretary, brought £300.

Roumania's Demands.

BUCHAREST, Dec. 3.—Romanul, a semi-official organ, declares that Roumania will never swerve from the course proclaimed in a speech from the throne, namely, that in Roumanian waters the river police must be carried on by Roumanian officials. It says it trusts the legitimacy of Roumania's demand and the equity of Europe will recall Austria to a more just and friendly sentiment.

A Good Cause for Immigration.

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—On debate on emigration in reichstag yesterday, an item in house estimates of 18,000 marks was ultimately passed for the supervision of emigration. Baron Von Boilsher, secretary of state, in reply to a deputy who lamented that emigration statistics of the present year had already reached the unprecedented number of 200,000, incidentally stated the government hoped to introduce the promised bill on the subject early in the spring. A liberal deputy who said he lived a long time in the United States, declared Germans were attracted thither by a certainty of finding everything which they vainly asked from their government at home.

London Wool Sales.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—At the wool sales to-day 92,000 bales were sold, comprising Port Phillip and Cape. A good spirit was shown and full rates obtained.

BY STATE TELEGRAPH.

Dr. Jennings' Suicide.

ASTORIA, Dec. 4.—Dr. Jennings, who shot himself yesterday, died this morning. His office slate was found under his pillow, and on it written, "Please bury me in Astoria without delay." A letter also was found, dated:

ASTORIA, Dec. 3.

Dear mother, sisters and friends: I wish I could know at this moment that you will all take a philosophical view of my deed. It will soon be far better with me than it has ever been.

M. D. JENNINGS.

His mother and sisters reside in Rockingham county, Virginia.

STAGE GOSSIP.

A suit for damages to the amount of $299 was brought in a justice court in San Francisco, last week, by Augusto Montegriffo against Jacob Muller and Inez Fabbri, growing out of a recent operatic tour through the Oregon towns. Don't you wish you may get it?

Snellbaker's combination, which was so vehemently denounced as an indecent exhibition by the San Francisco papers last spring, is now performing at Rome, N. Y. We hear no complaints from that quarter. Maybe they don't want decent exhibitions in the empire state.

Miss May Newton, a variety actress, who left her home and family to elope with an actor named Hamilton, adjourned under a dose of "cold pizen" near Detroit about ten days ago. The cause of her suicide is attributed to the fact that her paramour had seduced her daughter as well as herself.

Alonzo Hatch, who sang the part of Grenicheux in the "Chimes of Normandy" in this city with the Emelie Melville troupe last winter, is now at the Bijou opera house in New York. He has a fine voice, but as for the rest of it, don't talk. We may have seen worse actors, but it bothers us to remember where.

Lawrence Barrett, having finished his biography of Forrest, is engaged in a work upon the antiquity of the drama. He will give the programme of the floating circus of which old Capt. Noah was ringmaster. He will also describe the first performance of the "Two Orphans," with Castor and Pollux as the girls.

The pack of bloodhounds which create such a sensation in the performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by Lehnen's troupe, amused themselves by eating up a trick donkey belonging to the same troupe. The manager is now in search of a retired government mule, capable of attending to business with all four shoes on one foot.

As the painters were giving an extra coat of paint to the Opera House in Galveston, recently, a pot of paint was upset over a new suit of clothes upon the person of Dr. Hamilton Griffin, who brought suit for damages. The jury couldn't see it, and so the medico lost his suit at law as well as his suit of clothes. The subsequent proceedings didn't suit him at all.

John McCullough is rehearsing a new play written by Lewis Winfield and called "Democracy." It will probably introduce a hero by the name of Sammy Tilden, with John Kelly for the heavy villain and Boss Tweed for the ghost. And perhaps there will be "a bar'l of money" in it—at least we hope so for genial John's sake.

FOR THE WHEAT FIELD.

"CONCRETE STREET IMPROVEMENTS" ON THE PRESENT PLAN.

How Portland may become a Manufacturing Centre of Fertilizing Material for the Wheat Fields of the Northwest.

The area of the district would be about 600 acres within the city limits, at an area [illegible] or about 160 acres with the additions. This would make it [illegible] a good-sized bed for grinding rock and making compost.

We know the original soil, like all the hills, is good for wheat. It is of the same basalt origin which has been tested everywhere with success. Some difficulties have been in the way on account of so much planking. In a few streets the Nicholson [illegible]. But plank and Nicholson are fast going to the gulches to make the sub-drains of the new ground. The side-walks occupy a large space and they will probably remain until the street jobs are done. The Belgian blocks promise to be a little slow to make new soil, but the great enterprise of macadam bids fair to make up all deficiencies. It has in its favor the city council, commonly called "City Fathers," and an unknown number of interested friends. It has also some ordinances called "improvement ordinances," which squint sharply in the way of grinding and mixing material for the wheat fields on the public streets. It has also some help to do it in the line of hard cash on approved securities. The law permits the owners of adjacent blocks to improve the streets. The council kindly orders it done in macadam as the most approved method, on the petition of one or two owners, especially if twenty or thirty remonstrate; for the council propose to do a patriotic job while they have the power.

The first assessment on the lot owners, in aid of this noble work for laying a good foundation for raising wheat is simply to pay the cost of furnishing the macadam of fixed grades, from a good-sized stone to a top-dressing finely powdered, laying down the whole carefully by hand, and rolling the street many times over to make a smooth oval surface fit for a race course. The whole street is also to be fringed with gutters a la mode Belgian, beautiful to look at when done, but in which very little water is disposed to run.

One example illustrates the cost per block. Two lots on one street cost the owner $230. On the other street the estimated cost is $200, when this famous improvement is to be ordered next spring. At $215 per lot, the first outlay is only the snug sum of $1720 per block, which is deemed very reasonable for an improvement in a prosperous city like Portland. No good citizen is expected to object to this light tax on his property, since its value will be much increased, and the merchants and clerks and moneyed strangers can ride by on the new street many times after business hours and after dinner very swiftly, and view everybody's lots with reference to buying sites for new brick stores, hotels, etc.

It is easy to see that the whole cost to the owners of 1000 city blocks would be only $1,720,000, and for the present "Additions" only $516,000 more. This seems rather a large bill for a city of 20,000 people, Chinese included. Some lot owners, who work for a living, may not be able to pay it, but speculators stand ready to take lots, houses and gardens, and pay for this new improvement; or even the contractors will be kind enough to do it, and relieve the owners, and let them stay in their homes for a fair monthly rent, payable in advance.

Any way the city as a whole will have the honor of miles of streets of the Oakland pattern. What field of a million or so can offset such an honor!

PECULIAR ADVANTAGES.

This macadam enterprise finds that nature has been working in its favor. At the point of the hill on the Canyon road the company struck a body of porous stone of all grades ready to be shoveled into the carts. It required but little sorting. It crushed easily. It was in process of decomposition by rains, frosts and air, and over it was a soil of fine tilth, fit for wheat on which clover and other grasses thrived. This was a capital discovery. Streets could be made easily and the prospect for more soil was good. Another like discovery was made on the Robinson hill road. At most openings it was found that the natural cleavage of the basalts had been seamed into wider clefts by water and chemical erosion, thus saving the companies the cost of drill and powder and almost of the pick. It seemed, however, to them best, for some unknown reason, to crush a part of the harder stone for top dressing. Possibly the dust of the softer stone in summer and autumn winds was found disagreeable to the workmen.

SUCCESS OF THE JOB.

Soon after the first street was laid and rolled it was found that every wagon, cart, carriage, dray or truck assisted in the process of trituration. The dust, which marks good wheat soil, became finer than flour, blew into people's faces, eyes, noses, ears and clothing, into door-yards, sifted over flower beds, into windows and door-cracks and key-holes, covered furniture and food with finest and richest coatings of that which makes prolific wheat lands. It was lost to the streets but it was saved on the blocks and buildings. It was a relief to know that carriage wheels prepared a fresh supply every day.

When the rain came it was quickly turned into finest mud. The pedestrian need but study his boots to discover that he had been walking over an incipient wheat field. As the mud deepened a drawback was put upon this enterprise in the shape of an order to clean these streets, which meant, scrape them and haul off the top mud to fill gulches, at a cost to the owner of the lots of more than the interest on the first assessment. The only gain of it is was to fill the gulches and make more land, and give the carriage wheels a chance to grind the next larger stone. It has been intimated that fresh lots of ground stone will be brought from the quarries to round up the streets, to be carted off in like manner to the gulches, as soon as they become fine mud.

THE PROBLEM.

It is hard to find by figures when these streets will become wheat fields, if the dust is blown off and the mud is carted off as soon as it is made, or where the profit to the lot owners or the city can be found.

But if the excellent soil of our streets is so disturbed by passing teams—by the evening airings of the clerks and the other fellows—it may at least be employed to fertilize the thousands of fields in the state. Viewed as a fertilizer factory Third street excites the highest admiration. True, it is an expensive one, but vulgar considerations should not enter into a matter affecting a great public interest. But if the people who have to pay the bill would insist—the senseless rabble can never be controlled—upon the question of cost, and if they will growl and raise an unpleasant public row about it, the business features of the case should be presented to them. It will not be denied, it certainly cannot be disproved, that the street paving industry carried on in Portland is a most profitable one. During this season it has put about $400,000 into the pockets of contractors, fully one-tenth of which has been distributed for honest labor on the streets, and among those whose profession it is to care for the welfare of the city. This keeps money in circulation and so contributes to the general advantage. This industry finds in our streets a practically inexhaustible field. Not till all the hills back of the city have been exhausted in supplying dust in summer and silt paste in winter, will its resource fail, and let us hope that the necessity, which can never fail, will discover other convenient deposits of rotten rock. But let me return to the slighted point of public advantage from the financial activity promoted by this great industry. The way a property holder has to rustle about to get money to pay the assessments cultivates his financiering powers wonderfully. In this general exercise the community has been vastly benefited. It is true that the contractors who preside over this great system make money and a great deal of it, but extraordinary talents deserve great rewards.

ACTRESS HUSBANDS.

How the Wedded Attachments of Theatrical Ladies enjoy Life.

New York Despatch.

A visit to one of the artists in the past week to the [illegible] of an actress whose name is [illegible] means unfamiliar to the metropolitan public, enabled the writer something of a curious revelation.

The lady in question is [illegible] attractive in her stage make-up at home, much of the beauty seen under the fierce glare of the calcium and the changing light and [illegible] attractive elements of her inimitable art has vanished. Yet there are the brilliant eyes, there is the charming grace of movement, the pleasant smile and the gentleness of voice and suitability of manner which make her as welcome in society as she is beloved in her domestic circle.

She has a husband, and thereby hangs the revelation.

Why she ever married him is one of those enigmas which, to use Dundreary's phrase, "No fellah can find out." She is vivacious, witty, educated, talented, and with the public in her profession capacity, popular. He is dull, a fellow with a knowledge of no particular business whereby he might at least earn his bread and store-clothes. As a matter of surmise, it is questionable whether, since his marriage, he has ever earned enough to pay for his whisky.

Well, the visitor finds the lady in a cosy sitting-room, the windows of which overlook the house yard.

Glancing out of one of the windows, the visitor found the revelation. That husband was sawing wood. Absolutely working! It was a hard-wood stick, too—a knotty-looking bit of shellbark hickory that his knee held to the buck, while his arms slowly rasped the saw through the slivers.

The visitor looked at the lady. She smiled at his expression of astonishment.

"You think it strange? That is his punishment. Do you comprehend?"

The visitor did not. The idea of her husband sawing wood, voluntarily, as a penance for some dire transgression of the rules and regulations of his own household, was an additional revelation.

"Oh, you do not know what a good fellow he'll be for the next three months! It's the first time since last April that he has given me trouble. He came home as drunk as a lord last night. This morning I gave him a bit of my mind and his punishment, which was to saw four times through each of twenty sticks of that cord-wood. And he had to do it, or accept the other alternative."

"What was that?"

"Not to have a cent of spending money from me for the next three months. Once, about six months ago, while I was playing an engagement in Boston, he drew my salary—or rather the treasurer handed it to him to give to me. When I saw him again he had spent more than half of it, and he was terribly used up. What'd I do? When he came back home I made him shovel two tons of coal in the cellar, take up the dining room carpet, whitewash the kitchen and the yard fence, and do without money for a month after. But he's a good fellow, and sometimes—yes," she added thoughtfully—"sometimes I fancy I love him dearly."

There are instances—and these are the exceptions which make more notable the rule—of men who, having nothing in common of a knowledge of or interest in the stage, have been and are excellent husbands.

For instance, there is, of "these few," an example in Mr. Paddock, the husband of Maggie Mitchell, and rather queerly alluded to in a certain biographical work as "a young man of Cleveland." This gentleman was married to the little lady, Oct. 15, 1868. Their courtship was somewhat lengthened—lasting as it did nearly fourteen years. Since their marriage no cloud of disagreement, no breath of scandal has risen to cast a shade upon their domestic life; he has proven to her that she made no error of judgment in her selection of a mate; proved it by his integrity of character, his devotion to her interests, his respect for her position, and his loyalty to the home in which she presides over the welfare of the younger Mitchells.

As a contrast, her sister, Mary Mitchell, married in the profession, Mr. James W. Collier being her first husband. From him she was divorced in 1860, and in July 1866 she became the wife of Mr. James W. Albaugh, the actor and manager.

We all know the history of the marriage of Bonfanti, the danseuse, to a "young gentleman of society"—of their European troubles—of his lamentable death. And we know, too, of the dire result so far as domestic happiness is concerned, of the ill-starred marriage of one of the greatest American actresses now living—a marriage which is embittered by that incompatibility of temperament, and by the utter want of the husband's sympathy with her art, regarding it as he does as a mere vehicle of pecuniary emolument, and herself as the advertisement of that art. No doubt he has an affection for her—all men love that which brings them profit—and he may, too, possess that sort of respect for her as a woman, which she possibly accepts in lieu of love.

Wisely they veil from the world as much as possible their troubles, and continue together, "enjoying their misery" as best they may.

There is another example of this marriage out of the profession. There was playing in this city, upon a very recent date, one of the popular women—a representative woman she is, too—of the comic opera stage. She is handsome, plays with a vivacious grace of action, dances the can-can with a reckless abandon that sets her audience in a feverish craze, and by her methods has since her first appearance in the city made herself the recipient of a salary she never in her earlier time dreamed would be hers. She married a stranger to the stage. No doubt it was a marriage of mutual affection. It is possible there was in that affection a small leaven of that sensational but extremely rare article known as love. Children were born to them. The husband's idea of self-sustenance perhaps faded from his mind as her professional reputation grew brighter and more valuable. And now, as a husband, he closely approaches the condition of a mere dependent—and an exceedingly hilarious and expensive one, too.

He is shrewd. There is nothing of the fool in his composition. He isn't the sort of submissive fellow who would take in as penance wood-sawing or carpet-shaking. He is a rebellious, obstinate dependent, and can always be relied on as the most unreliable husband any woman need desire to support as a luxury which has grown out of a necessity.

He is shrewd and sharp in getting the best of managers in making contracts for his wife's engagements. He makes them pay dearly for a quibble or a flaw in it, and he well knows that the more she gets the larger will be his spread of pocket-money. And what he does not know about having a supply of that useful article about him may be accepted as worthless. He is going to have it, and by hook or crook he gets it. His face is familiar in all the saloons in the vicinity of the theater, and there or upon the grand professional parade-ground in Union-square he delights in displaying his "wealth"—at such times as he may have temporarily a surfeit of "boodle." Of course the greater bulk of it he dares not use; it is the property of the hard-working little woman, and she has taught him that much of economy—but—he doesn't suffer.

Imagine a little "scena"—that's what the Italian organ-crank twister called the ruction between himself and a policeman in Crosby street, in which the organ got the worst of it and the policeman the last of it—at the station house. A little "scena" between the husband of an actress and the manager of a comic opera troupe—the actress being the leading woman, their star, and in fact their chief and only hope of success "on the road" or in the city. The contract for the season is signed—salary $250 a week—the wife to play "only in first-class theaters." Tableau of satisfaction; husband jubilant, and immediately endeavors to get an order on the box-office cashed in advance of the first week's salary.

Ah! The managers of the troupe make a change of base. They are in "straits" as it were. Here is a chance at a new theater. All right. Husband saw nothing until the managers of the troupe have signed, sealed and delivered with the manager of the theater. Then up steps the gallant hub—and a gallant, shrewd hub is he—and, with finger on the contract says:

"Ah, ha! by my halidome an' I have thee on the hip. See'st thou this? 'Only in first class theaters.' This theater is not first class; it is a restaurant, beer-mill and concert hall combined. Come down! As the farmer with shotgun in hand remarked to a boy up an apple tree, Come down! Nothing will cover the loss of prestige, gentlemen, which playing in such a place will bring to my wife, except $500 a week—and $500 a week it must be. No pay, no play. C-o-m-e d-o-w-n!"

What could they do but come down, and they came down accordingly. The shot-gun of the owner of the preserves was too surely loaded, primed, cocked and aimed to admit of any dodging. How much this shrewd dramatic farmer corraled for his own use of this increase of the product of the managerial apple tree, which the managerial boys thought they had secure in their own pockets, and which should have in its entirety gone into the possession of the wife and actress, is as yet unknown—and likely to remain so.

Imagine such a little scene as that—slow music for exit of managers, quick drop on the joy of the remaining figures of the tableau, and an immediate rehearsal of the leading man, the hub, in an adjoining saloon. You may readily imagine such a "scena," for such a thing might be—even in real life.

Anna Pixley, in her union with Mr. Fulford, himself a professional; and at present her business manager; Jennie Lee, in her marriage with Mr. Burnett, who, although an actor not particularly prominent, has had a keen eye to business; Janauschek, and a score of others I could name had I the space, have led happy lives in their "double estate," and by their example of concord and good conduct, given "new lease of wholesome repute" to the stage and its better and purer purpose.

MATTERS AT OLYMPIA.

SPECIAL REPORT TO THE OREGONIAN.

OLYMPIA, Dec. 2.

The eighth biennial session closed last night in an unusually orderly manner—the members strictly attending to legitimate business up to the very last moment. No running out for toddies, no indelicate speeches, no unpleasant words, no sarcastic remarks. Nothing but the kindest feelings evinced on all sides, and such as might only be seen amongst members of the same family. Of all the legislative bodies that has ever assembled in this capitol, this has been without exception the most pleasant in every way, and it is creditable to the Territory of Washington, to know that from the governor down to the lowest officer, every one has proved himself a true gentleman in every sense of the word.

TERRITORIAL OFFICERS.

The committee appointed to examine the books and papers of territorial auditor and treasurer submitted the following: "We have made as thorough and careful an examination of the books and accounts of the territorial auditor as our limited time would permit, and we take pleasure in saying that the same appear to have been kept in a neat and thoroughly business-like manner. The entire office, considering the meager facilities with which it seems to have been heretofore provided, shows skillful management in all the varied routine of work necessary to the proper administration of its affairs, and thoughtful care upon the part of the auditor in the general management of the fiscal concerns of the territory.

The rapidly increasing duties and labors consequent upon the increase of population and material interests of the territory—its whole financial system centering through the territorial auditor's office—demand the attention of the legislature, and we would respectfully recommend, as a matter of wise economy, that provision be made at an early day for an increase of clerical force in that office.

In respect to the office of territorial treasurer, we find about the same state of affairs as in the office of auditor—well-kept books and all proper arrangement for the safe keeping of the money and valuable papers belonging to that office.

To the salary of the officer seems meagre in consideration of the heavy bond required, and the duties and responsibilities of the office—the treasurer and his bondsmen being insurers of the funds of the territory in every possible contingency.

We also report that the appropriation of $1500 made by the legislature of 1875 for the benefit of the territorial university was drawn from the treasury without the authority of law, and recommend that the prosecuting attorney proceed to recover the same." The report was adopted.

APPORTIONMENT BILL.

As the apportioning of members of the legislative assembly is one of the most important features of any session, I herewith furnish you with a full report of the matter for the benefit of your readers in this territory.

The bill provides that the council shall consist of twelve members, as follows: County of Walla Walla, 1 member; Columbia and Garfield, 1; Whitman, 1; Walla Walla, Columbia, Garfield and Whitman, 1 jointly; Stevens, Spokane and Yakima, 1; Klickitat, Skamania and Clarke, 1; Cowlitz, Wahkiakum, Pacific and Chehalis, 1; Lewis and Thurston, 1; Pierce and Kitsap, 1; Mason, Jefferson, Clallam and San Juan, 1; Island, Snohomish and Whatcom, 1; King, 1.

The house of representatives shall consist of 24 members, as follows: Walla Walla, 3; Columbia 1, Garfield 1, Whitman 2, Columbia and Whitman 1, Yakima 1, Stevens and Spokane 2, Klickitat 1, Skamania 1, Klickitat and Clark 1, Clark 1, Cowlitz, Wahkiakum, Pacific and Chehalis 2, Lewis 1, Thurston 1, Pierce 1, Mason, Jefferson and Clallam 1, King 2, Kitsap and King 1, Snohomish and Island 1, San Juan and Whatcom 1.

In relation to the matter of a united court in the third judicial district, after a strong fight in favor of La Conner, Whatcom county, Mr. Kinkaid was compelled to give way to New Tacoma, but only through being overpowered by superior numbers. His pluck and courage will not easily be forgotten by the house, and certainly should not be by his constituents.

A TALE OF THE TIMES.

[Chicago Tribune.]

"No, I refuse."

"Reflect a moment, Myrtle. I beseech you! You hold my life and happiness in your hands"—and the voice of Adelbert Tompkins trembled as he spoke these words with an earnestness that left no room, even for an instant, any doubt as to their being the outpourings of his heart.

Myrtle Mahaffy was a beautiful girl, just budding into sweet womanhood, and Adelbert loved her dearly. They had wandered together this summer afternoon from the main street to the street car, and he had asked her to be his wife. It was in answer to this question—the earnest appeal of a man whose whole nature was wrapped up in a passion he could not restrain or cast aside—that Myrtle had spoken the words with which our story opens. She had uttered them lightly, even carelessly, and at the instant they were falling upon Adelbert's ears with the horrid distinctness that marks the ringing of a prison bell as it tolls the knell of some misery within the walls of the dungeon beneath, had smiled witchingly upon Reginald Caryll, who was passing, and said, "How do?" in a cheery voice to a girl friend who accompanied him, but at heart Myrtle knew that she was taking a step that might alter the whole course of her life. She was a girl of strong perceptive faculties, a keen judge of human nature, and knew that he who had spoken those words that breathed only devotion and love was a man of many good qualities, and that he would cherish and protect her with his life's blood if necessary. But still she could not bring herself to marry him. She had watched him closely during an acquaintance of nearly two years, and noticed with pain how he sedulously avoided candy stores and ice-cream saloons. "I can never marry a man," she had said to her mother one day, "who shies at the sight of a candy store like a country horse at a fire engine." And when the expected avowal came she had kept her word.

Adelbert turned around in a dazed sort of way after Myrtle had rejected him, and walked swiftly towards the dry-goods store which had been so fortunate as to secure his services. Suddenly the merry tinkle of a street car bell aroused him from the reverie into which he had fallen. "Great heavens!" he said, "I forgot to pay her car fare! No matter if the proud beauty scorned my proffered love I should not have done this. She will think it is not the Tompkins blood that runs in my veins, but that of some base-born, cringing menial whose mind is tinged with sordid thoughts"—and he chewed so nervously at a tooth-pick that a fellow clerk who met the imagined that perchance he had been invited to dinner.

All the afternoon Adelbert stood moodily behind the ribbon counter thinking of how he should revenge himself on the naughty girl who had wrecked his happiness. At precisely 4:30 o'clock a fierce joy lighted up his countenance, and putting on his hat he left the store.

* * * * * * *

As the bells of St. Agnes' church were striking 9 a young man sprang lightly up the steps of a magnificent residence, and was soon seated in a sumptuously furnished parlor. The proprietor of the house, a benevolent looking old gentleman, entered the room. "Do you wish to see me?" he said to Adelbert Tompkins—for it was he who had sprang lightly up the steps.

"Yes," replied the young man, "you are the person I seek."

"What would you?" said the old gentleman.

"You are the cashier in the —— bank, I believe?" said the young man.

"I am."

"You have been stealing the concern's money. Do not seek to deceive me. You are a cashier; 'tis enough. Give me $20,000 or I will expose you and ruin your life. Having heard me twitter you can choose your own course"—and calmly cutting a chew of tobacco from a plug which he fished from his coat-tail pocket Adelbert waited for a reply to his cruel words.

For an instant the cashier did not move, and then going to an elegant escretoire which stood in a corner of the room he wrote a check for $50,000, certified and handed the piece of paper—now a fortune—to the young man.

"I have but one favor to ask," he said "and that is, that you will marry my daughter. I wouldn't like to let as sure a thing as you are go out of the family. She has $100,000 in her own right, and when I am dead and the bank directors are in jail on account of my bookkeeping it will suffice to keep you in comfort."

"I accept your terms," was all that Adelbert said as he left the house.

Two months later Myrtle Mahaffy, the cashier's only child, became Adelbert's bonny bride. One child, a blue-eyed boy with golden hair, has blessed the union, and as he sits on his grandfather's knee in front of the fire, and asks in his innocent, childish way, if "papa isn't a smart man?" the old gentleman kisses him fondly, and says in soft, low tones:

"You're singing on the right key now, sonny."

CHARLES SWEENEY, SPECIAL SOLICITOR.

EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 120 Broadway, New York.

LIFE INSURANCE PROFITS DEMONSTRATED BY ACTUAL SETTLEMENTS MADE IN 1880.

The Society is now paying maturing Tontine Policies with the following remarkable results:

POLICIES CARRIED TEN YEARS WITH THE RETURN OF ALL PREMIUMS PAID AND INTEREST THEREON.

1st Example: Policy No. 43,563, issued May 25, 1869. Amount $10,000 00

Total premiums paid (11 years) 5,504 60

The assured is now entitled to draw, in cash, $6,455.30, having had besides $10,000 of assurance for eleven years. 116 per cent. of premiums paid, returnable in cash.

This example and those which follow show that LARGER PROFITS ARE PAID POLICY-HOLDERS THAN ARE NOW DECLARED BY ANY OTHER COMPANY.

2d Example: Policy No. 58,543, issued Dec. 30, 1870. Endowment 20 years. Tontine Period ten years. Amount $10,000 00

Total premiums paid (10 years) 7,530 00

The assured on Dec. 30 1880, will be entitled to draw in cash, $9,033 30, 120 per cent of the premiums paid.

These results, although predicted by carefully made estimates, are.

NOT ESTIMATES, BUT ACTUAL CASH RETURNS.

3d Example: Policy No. 41,921, issued March 27, 1869. Amount $5,000 00

Total premiums paid 2,908 95

In this case the assured withdrew, March 27, 1880, in cash, $3,312 45, being 114 per cent. of premiums paid.

Many policies will be thus paid in 1881, showing

CASH RETURNS OF FROM 100 TO 120 PER CENT. OF THE PREMIUMS PAID.

Assets securely invested of $48,000,000. Surplus, nearly $10,500,000. The Society's popularity is shown by the fact that for the past eleven years the total amount of new policies issued has been greater than that of any other company in existence; thus making its average ANNUAL NEW BUSINESS LARGER THAN THAT OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

The Society pays death claims promptly and in full. Its policies are clear and concise, and with no unreasonable conditions.

EVERY POLICY BECOMES INCONTESTABLE AFTER THREE YEARS.

INDEPENDENT VOTERS AND NEWSPAPERS.

Comparison of full returns of the elections held lately in several of the eastern states, with the full vote of those states as it has been brought out at times before, shows that while there is scarcely a voter in America who would not declaim most bitterly against being deprived of the right of suffrage, there are many thousands who exercise that right only upon extraordinary occasions. The ballot is at once highly prized and sadly neglected. To secure a full vote is one of the most serious difficulties to be met with by those who take it upon themselves to conduct a campaign. Many who have the greatest interests at stake neglect to attend the polls, except in times of phenomenal political excitement, while those who really have the least at stake rarely fail to cast their vote on one side or the other. The sober sense of the people can always be relied on, when it expresses itself fully and honestly. But politicians assume the duty which the people ought to perform in primaries and conventions, and on election day there are thousands who refuse to vote because these preliminaries have not been conducted so as to bring about results to their tastes. Take out the number of those who have voted for successful candidates, unintelligently, with reward or hope of it, and many of those candidates would have been left in small minorities. In the city of Portland are hundreds and thousands of well known men, among them leaders in public enterprises, men with large interests in the city and state, who are among the foremost in the minds of those who might try to enumerate the list of the molders of public opinion; but let one examine the poll books of an ordinary election and he will be surprised to find that the vast majority of those who have voted are strangers to him, and still more astonished to note the infrequency with which he comes across the names of the men who are supposed to have the most influence in public affairs and equal interest at least with any others in the results of such elections. Because of this failure of so many men to use the ballot, there is a growing irreverence for it, and purity of the ballot box and the sacredness of the right of suffrage are no longer boasts of the American people. If upon every occasion when the voting population is called upon to exercise the elective franchise, each voter would go to the polls with a full understanding of the issues to be decided; uninfluenced by the rant of demagogues, or the bribes of the corrupt, unshackled by the prejudices of party; with an eye single to the interests of the country, and with a determination to cast a ballot in the way to make it most effective in promoting the public welfare, such a reform in our civil service would soon be brought about as we can hardly hope for while a system of politics is tolerated which disgusts many respectable men and keeps them away from the polls, while it recognizes trickery, corrupt influences and downright fraud as the greatest powers in a political campaign.

It has been said that wrong may prosper for awhile, but when its day is past, the right will come uppermost and truth will win; that corruption in official circles may be concealed for a time, but exposure must come and is sure to be followed by popular indignation and the degradation from place of those whose hands have not been kept clean. So it would be were it not that the people refuse to use the ballot, the weapon given them for the vindication of their rights, or use it in the interest of prejudice or party or of selfish and ambitious men, rather than of right, justice or honesty. To treat with condemnation all violations of law, whether they be of the grade that consigns the drunk and disorderly to the calaboose for forty-eight hours, or imprisons the public plunderer who has been placed in a position to make a big steal from the government is the province of the public teacher whether he wield the tongue or the pen. To treat with equal severity the political wrongs that may show themselves, is the province of the independent political newspaper. In the common mind neutrality and independence are too often confounded. The man who stays away from the polls and votes with neither side, is neutral; the newspaper which combats error, whether it be found in the party or out of it, which treats the wrong-doers of its own party as it does those of its opponents, is independent. Such a journal does not always please all people. Honest men often differ; even a majority may, in moments of political excitement, get into a wrong groove and run astray until the second thought is taken; and in such times the independent journal may be censured by the over-enthusiastic or unduly excited politician, but the reasonable, sober-minded, will finally concede the correctness of the position. Temporary triumph even may sometimes be lost, but ultimate permanent prosperity comes not from any other course. When the voters who call themselves independent come solidly to the polls, and publications calling themselves newspapers cease to be organs of party cliques or ambitious politicians, and become organs of truth, advocates of great principles, defenders of right and champions of law, the millenium in politics will have almost dawned.

The director of the United States mint recently made the statement that the coinage of gold during the last twelve months had been five times as much as during any previous year. As the yield of our mines has been falling off, this statement may seem unaccountable. But it is explained that the stream of foreign gold which has poured so steadily across the Atlantic has supplied much of the material for the work of the mint, and when this metal returns to Europe, if it ever does, it will bear the stamp of United States coin. It would be flattering to American pride to have assurance that by the continuation of this process of importation and coinage the gold currency of the world would ultimately be made to bear the mark of the United States mint, but when the tide turns and the metal returns to Europe, it is likely to be sent to the melting pots of nations there, to be converted into coins bearing the stamp of their mints. This is the usual course and history of the movement of the precious metals under the subtle laws of trade that control them.

It was stated not long since that James Rothschild, the younger, had lost 80,000,000 francs, nearly $16,000,000, on the Paris bourse, and had died broken-hearted. A Paris correspondent of a New York paper gives this explanation: A rich legitimist started a bank called "L'Union Generale." The Comte de Chambord took a considerable number of shares, and is said to have gained on them a profit of 5,000,000 francs. "L'Union Generale" went up rapidly. Certain Jewish capitalists had confidence in it, and tried to buy its stock. But they soon discovered that one of the objects of the directory was to make a "deal" at their expense; so they determined to "bear" the enterprise and ruin it. But James Rothschild, who had previously "bulled" the stock, made tremendous losses. Still, he loyally kept silence, and would have been censured for treason by every member of the great Rothschild family had he not. Here is an incident which illustrates the riotously wild speculation that rages in Paris. The stock exchange of New York has been called a Quaker meeting compared with the Paris bourse.

A Washington dispatch says the army has lost over 3000 men during the year, that there is great difficulty now in obtaining recruits, and the army officers are much perplexed by the outlook in this respect. The situation is indeed serious, and unless relief is afforded in some way at once, the prospect is that the commands will be reduced to one private to each officer, instead of three as now.

Congress assembles in regular session to-day. It is probable that the organization of the house will be easily and speedily effected. Nomination of Gen. Keifer, of Ohio, for the speakership by the republican caucus would seem to assure early organization. If the house organizes to-day, the president's message may be expected at once.

Ohio gets another triumph in the nomination of Gen. Keifer for the speakership. It is said that "stalwart bosses" supported him. Be that as it may, he is not of their faction. Ohio doesn't tolerate men of that kind.

Daniel Webster was born at Salisbury N. H., January 1782. The 100th anniversary of his birth will be celebrated by Dartmouth college and also at Boston. Preparations are already made.

WEARY OF SUFFERING.

WILLIAM GRAY, A PORTLAND PIONEER, TAKES HIS LIFE.

The Deed prompted by untold Mental and Physical Pain—Short Sketch of an Honest Man's Life.

Yesterday morning about eight o'clock William Gray, a pioneer of Portland, whose physical sufferings were greater than his strength to bear them, put an end to his life. He lived on the southwest corner of Third and Jefferson streets, in the old Stinson homestead, and came home Saturday night at the customary dinner hour, remaining at his fireside during the evening, and, with his wife, retired early. He awoke shortly after daylight but did not arise. Mrs. Gray, a few minutes before the sad occurrence, began to prepare breakfast. She had not been away from her husband long when a shot was heard from a spare bedroom adjoining their own, and hurrying thither, she found him on the bed in throes of death. He had taken a breech-loading shotgun containing a heavy charge, sat upon the edge of the bed, placed the muzzle in his mouth, and touched the trigger with his foot. The charge passed out the top of his head. The coroner was summoned and held an inquest with the following jury: C. M. Wiberg, John Kiernan, W. N. Wallace, John Ewry, R. J. Furnes and D. Stinson. A verdict in accordance with the facts above recited was returned.

William Gray came to Portland in 1851, having made the trip overland from California. He was a carpenter and worked at the bench by the day until May, 1853, when he formed a partnership with R. Porter in the contracting business. Their shop was near the corner of First and Morrison, about where Skidmore's drug store now stands, and their first work was a building at Rainier for Reed, Harper & Toomby. The partnership lasted six years. He was very industrious and frugal, soon acquired a little property to which he added from year to year, and leaves an estate valued probably at $40,000, free from debt. He was not in good health for the last few years, and during the past twelvemonth suffered very much mentally and physically from nervous prostration—the result of malaria. Since July he was so despondent, especially during forenoon hours, that nothing could be done to cheer him. Usually towards evening he became more composed, and received the consolations of friends who called, with evident satisfaction. He remarked frequently of late that he wanted to die, that he had suffered a thousand deaths and could not stand the pain much longer. The thoughts that he was hopelessly ill; that his children could not make a noise without disturbing him, and that he was a burden to his family, were more than he could bear, and he made such assertions often to intimate friends. He was not able to sleep after 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, and his paroxysms of pain were always stronger soon after arising than at any other time. It is evident that the fatal step was taken during one of these spasms, which no doubt overthrew his reason. He was a native of Lincolnshire, England, 53 years old, and leaves three daughters and three sons—the youngest child 16 years old. He was head of the firm of Wm. Gray & Sons, boot and shoe dealers. Every old resident of Portland knew Mr. Gray and respected him for his industry and strict honesty.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

SUPREME COURT.

SALEM, Dec. 2, 1881.

Supreme court met at 10 o'clock A. M., full bench being present.

A. E. Smith, respondent, vs. Gideon S. Cox, appellant. Judgment of the court below reversed and a new trial ordered. Opinion by Watson, J.

SYLLABUS.

Where the plaintiff claimed $2500 damages, and the defendant admitted $2000, and the plaintiff obtained a verdict and judgment for the latter sum only, an error of the court below in rejecting certain testimony offered by the defendant to reduce the amount of damages claimed, did not prejudice defendant's rights, and is no ground for reversal.

2. S. sued C. and Son on a bond given by them to secure a conveyance of title to land, to recover damages for a breach of its conditions. C. defended on the grounds that the bond described a different tract than he intended, and also bound him for the conveyance of a different interest in the land than he intended, and understood he was binding himself to convey. That he believed when he executed the bond it only covered a certain tract previously sold to plaintiff by the son G. W. Cox, for his own benefit, and only bound him to convey his interest therein. That this belief was induced, and his signature to the bond obtained by the false and fraudulent representations of the plaintiff's agent, made in his presence and hearing, without correction, that the bond only bound him to the extent indicated.

Held, That testimony showing that G. W. Cox, at the time he sold the land to plaintiff, went with him and pointed out the boundaries, and that the tract so sold was not the tract described in the bond, was admissible upon the question of fraud. It was a fact tending, at least, to prove that plaintiff knew at the time the alleged misrepresentations were made, that they were false, and thereby establishing their fraudulent character, which was essential to the defense at law.

City of Portland, appellant, vs Perry G. Baker, respondent; judgment of the circuit court affirmed.

James R. Sears vs J. W. McGrew; on trial.

Cardwell, Bennett & Co., of the Pacific boot and shoe house, wish to inform the ladies that they have received a large lot of West Bros. hand-sewed, cork sole, pebble goat shoes. Every pair guaranteed.

The temperance question was fiercely Monday, 5th inst., is city election and decides the question of license of liquor in Scio for at least a year.

The much discussed railroad subscription business again bids fair to attract attention. When it is settled definitely then something now waiting will be invested. We hear of several enterprises talked of by solid men.

THE GUITEAU TRIAL.

The Assassin Completely Fails at Last.

JUDGE PORTER OUTWITS THE CUNNING VILLAIN.

After Three Days of Skillful Baffling, his Guard is Broken through and the Blackness of his Crime Shown up in its True Colors.

[From the Sunday Oregonian.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—After the temporary adjournment, Guiteau took the stand and continued: A little before 9 o'clock went to the depot and had his boots blacked.

Porter—Did you want to be in full dress when you killed him?

Prisoner—(drawlingly)—No. I didn't want to be in full dress. I don't want to be interrupted.

Porter—And I don't want to be interrupted.

Prisoner—Then keep quiet.

Prisoner then proceeded with his story: Blaine and the president drove up in a single-horse carriage and not in the White House carriage, which showed how much the president was under Blaine's influence. Blaine was blowing and blowing and the president was listening. They were on most intimate terms. Blaine got out on one side of the carriage and Garfield out on the other. They walked up to the depot and passed within a few feet of the prisoner, who drew his weapon and fired twice and hit him once.

Q.—You shot him in the back?

A.—I did not fire at any particular place.

Q.—Did you not fire for the hollow of his back?

A.—My intention was to shoot him in the back.

Q.—Did you think if he got two balls in his back it would remove him?

A.—I thought so.

Q.—And you intended to put them there?

A.—I did.

Q.—[In a solemn manner]—And from that hour to this you have never felt regret or remorse?

A.—I regret giving pain or trouble to any one, but I have no doubt as to the necessity of the act or the divinity of the act.

Q.—You have never hinted at any remorse.

A.—My mind is a perfect blank on that subject.

Q.—Do you feel any more remorse about rendering his wife a widow and his children fatherless than about breaking the leg of that puppy dog?

A.—I have no conception of it as murder or killing.

Q.—And you feel no remorse?

A.—(In a low and almost inaudible voice)—Of course I feel remorse, so far as my personal feelings are concerned. I feel remorse as much as any man, and regret the necessity of the act, but (raising his voice)—

Mr. Porter—The cross-examination is closed.

"But," continued the prisoner excitedly, "my duty to the Lord and the American people overcame my personal feelings. If the Lord had not inspired that act it would not have been done."

Scoville then proceeded with the re-direct examination, and the prisoner said:

"I have been just as clear as to the divinity of the act and necessity of it for the good of the people since the 1st of June as a man can be of anything."

When examination of prisoner closed he was conducted, looking completely worn out, from the stand to his regular seat beside his counsel.

Scoville then called Dr. Alexander Hall of Columbus, Ohio, who testified to seeing the prisoner there some three or four years ago. Prisoner was then engaged in trying to lecture on theology and sell the inspired volume of his authorship, and which he said was one of the finest literary productions that ever emanated from an inspired pen.

"I am sorry to contradict you," interposed the prisoner, "but I never said so."

Witness had several conversations with him, and was under the impression, which he expressed to his friends at the time, that the prisoner was a lunatic.

Scoville called Emory A. Storrs, Charles B. Farwell, and other witnesses, but as none of them responded court adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The first witness was J. O. P. Burnside, disbursing officer of the postoffice department, who formerly lived in Freeport, Ills., and knew prisoner's family. Mr. L. Guiteau was an invalid.

Chas. Allen of Missouri lived in Freeport in 1839 and 1840; knew the Guiteau family; Mrs. Guiteau was in feeble health.

Emory A. Storrs of Chicago knew Guiteau in that city by sight as a young lawyer; saw him perhaps at times; at the republican committee rooms in New York during the last presidential canvass prisoner came up to him gleefully and patting him on the shoulder said "you are on the right track." Witness never saw Guiteau doing anything at the committee rooms more than reading papers. He seemed to have no special employment. In April he saw prisoner at Washington. He said he was going to have the Austrian mission. Witness told him the place was an important one and in Blaine's line, and that (Blaine) was known as a politician. Prisoner replied he was solid with Blaine. Witness thought the conversation was leading up to a request for him (witness) to visit Blaine in Guiteau's interest, and forestalled it by saying his relations with Blaine were such he could not possibly aid him (prisoner) any. Witness had formed an opinion as to Guiteau's mental size, but could not express an opinion as to his sanity or insanity. His impression was that Guiteau had an illy-balanced mind, or in common parlance he did not have "good common sense."

W. tness was asked in relation to the political status just prior to the shooting of President Garfield; if there were not elements of discord in the republican party which threatened to disrupt it.

Reply—I think the republican party a pretty difficult one to disrupt, and while there were elements of discord, my belief in the good sense of the rank and file is such that I think it would have held together.

Upon cross-examination, witness said he never saw anything in Guiteau to indicate he could not distinguish between right and wrong; never saw anything in the conduct of prisoner that would indicate he did not know the difference between guilt or innocence, never saw anything to indicate he would not be responsible for the crime.

Scoville noted several exceptions to the rulings of Judge Cox in favor of admission of these replies. The evidence created quite a stir in the court room and seemed to stagger those about the defense table. A sister of the prisoner was particularly affected and in tones distinctly caught by the reporter said: "He has perjured himself, that is all there is about it."

Edward Daniels testified he thought Guiteau crazy.

Scoville made a sensation by summoning David Davies, Speaker Randall, Senator Bayard and President Arthur, none of whom responded, although they had been subpensed. Scoville then read a number of newspaper slips found on the prisoner at the time of his capture.

Guiteau interrupted, saying there were a hundred of them when he was arrested, which he took from stalwart, liberal and half breed papers, whenever he saw anything confirming his inspiration.

Scoville was reading a clipping from the Star when a movement became noticeable about the door leading to the witness room and in a moment Senator David Davis was seen going toward the witness stand. Reading ceased, the senator was sworn and Scoville proceeded to question him on political philosophy. The judge was non-committal on everything, and continually demurred to that line of proceeding. Judge Davis was excused after a few moments, and for a minute occupied a seat on the bench with Judge Cox, where he studied the prisoner's countenance for some time and then left the court room.

Bailey, district attorney's stenographer, was put upon the stand, and Guiteau became at once excited, and charged witness with coming to him as a New York Herald reporter and tricking him into an interview, the notes of which were used by the district attorney. Bailey afterward made up a report from his notes for the New York Herald, and Guiteau wanted to know what he received for it. It was finally brought out that Bailey had been given $500.

The prisoner was worked up considerably and contradicted the witness, accusing him of perpetrating a fraud upon him.

Scoville wanted Bailey's notes, but they had been destroyed.

After Scoville resumed reading of clippings, and there being no other witnesses, court adjourned.

The Prisoner's Discomfiture.

Guiteau left the stand this afternoon after his three days' siege a broken man. He was tired out, haggard, faded, disgusted, sullen and ugly, and there seemed about him a consciousness that Judge Porter, the terrible cross-examiner, had, despite his cunning theories and his persistence, shown that the inspiration theory was simply a part of the defense planned long before. The malice of Guiteau had brought him to the river's bank to fire at the marsh reeds for a target.

Guiteau, although a coward and driven into a corner, saw the force of every one of Judge Porter's questions, and endeavored to evade them, and manifested undoubted skill. There were some words which almost caused him to wince with terror. He shrunk, and seemed to shiver in the witness box when Judge Porter used the words "murder," "kill" and "assassin." Judge Porter made it clear that Guiteau was able to control the divine presence the day Mrs. Garfield came to the depot with the president, and emphasized this fact, which has such important bearing upon the question of responsibility. Cross-examination was eminently successful. It lifted the mask and showed the plot to murder the president was premeditated and deliberate and was the result of malice and revenge. The prisoner felt it keenly. Porter completely broke down the wonderfully quick and supple witness.

"Do you feel any remorse?" was the last question which Judge Porter asked. After having been pressed earnestly upon that point some moments, the prisoner answered suddenly:

"I have felt remorse, of course, as far as my personal feelings are concerned."

Judge Porter, as quick as lightning, and dramatically, said, "That will do, prisoner; your examination is closed."

Guiteau, writhing under the tremendous force of Judge Porter's question, saw the terrible effect of his confession. During all these moments one part of his defense has been to insist to all that he never had a single sentiment of remorse. During this cross-examination he has said a dozen times to Judge Porter's terrible questions, "his mind was a blank upon that subject." To all the experts who have called upon him during these weeks he has insisted, with graceful pertinacity, that a thought of remorse never came to him; that his mind upon that subject was a blank. Yet to-night, at the end of three days' cross-examination, at the crisis of as rigid a cross-examination as a prisoner was ever subjected to, he admitted to that which seemed to bring a shudder to his relatives and caused a sensation in the court room. He had killed the president and had suffered remorse.

With cat-like quickness Guiteau rallied from what seemed almost like paralysis, caused by the tremendous thundering of Judge Porter at him, and endeavored to correct what he plainly saw was the effect of that admission. Judge Porter would not listen to a word, but waved his hand.

Scoville tried to parry the effect, but apparently without success, and Guiteau left the stand more discouraged than he has appeared at any time during the trial.

THE EASTERN FREIGHT SITUATION.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The clipper freight market continues to show a good degree of activity. Ships in berth are doing very well, and there is every prospect that there will be at least five departures, and perhaps six, during the current month. Shipments are miscellaneous, including oils, candles, canned goods, coal, drugs, iron, hardware, glassware, agricultural goods, and in fact, almost every article that goes to make up a California cargo. Tonnage is still scarce, and new engagements for our lines are limited by reason of the small number of ships available; every vessel in sight being taken up to January.

Freights at Philadelphia are quiet. The Theobald loads slowly, although being small, she may get off this month.

Freights at Boston are quiet and active, and although the Oakland only came in berth yesterday, there is enough cargo on the wharf to more than half fill her, and she will have prompt dispatch.

Railroad freights at Boston have been lively, and shipments the past week large, including 2070 pkgs fish, 40 bxs figs, 400 cs canned goods, 200 bxs herrings, 980 cs canned goods, and 345 kegs horseshoes.

REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The following special report of the real estate market is furnished THE SUNDAY OREGONIAN by J. Fred. Clark & Co., real estate agents:

If the market has shown one specially marked feature during the present year, it has been that buyers, believing that the future of Portland is assured, have invested north, south, west and east of the river as prejudice or inclination have dictated. Literally there has been all-round confidence. The readers of our analyses (which have been accurately compiled for THE OREGONIAN from the county records) have doubtless observed that the heavy business has been done in the city proper, i. e., between the south line of Couch's and the north line of Carruthers' addition, Couch sometimes leading, has almost uniformly held a strong second place, whilst Carruthers' and East Portland have contested for the third. The number of transactions at this present as contrasted with the corresponding period of 1880 stand about in the relation of 3 to 2, and the amount involved nearly if not quite in proportion of 3 to 1.

This remarkable improvement is mainly due to railroad operations, which have favorably affected real estate in every part of Oregon, changing the former languid condition of the market and making it active and buoyant beyond precedent. The demand for country lands is continuous and we believe beyond precedent, evidencing the fact that industrial immigration is pouring in upon us. The public mind is exercised with regard to the exact locations of railroad termini and depots in the city, and many speculations have recently been made by those who think they know. So far as we are able to ascertain no definite conclusion has been arrived at under this head, beyond that already publicly announced that the depot, warehouses and workshops of the O. R. & N. Co. will be located on the company's property in South Portland. The business of the week, according to the county records, shows 58 deeds with a total consideration of $103,528 50, distributed as follows:

Couch and Northward	9 deeds	31,530 00
Country and Suburban	15 "	36,614 50
East Portland	17 "	19,436 00
Caruthers and Southward	8 "	7,250 00
City proper	8 "	8,648 00
Cemetery lot	1 "	50 00
Total	58	$103,528 50
